

PRESIDENTIAL BOOMS OF CUMMINS AND MANN SHORT OF GAS BECAUSE 'UNCLE JOE' HELD THE SPOTLIGHT

Congressmen Returning to Capital From Hawaii Trip Get Amusement at Expense of Aspirants for Premier Honors—How Story Was Handed Around in Official Washington

By C. S. ALBERT.
(Special Star-Bulletin Correspondence)
WASHINGTON, D. C., June 24.—Members of the congressional party returning from Hawaii are telling everybody here, from the President down, how Uncle Joe Cannon captured the hearts of the island citizens, leaving the presidential booms of Cummins and Mann short of gas. These tales have created much amusement and contributed materially to the endurance of the hot season.

This is the way the story was handed out in Washington:

"Sugar is the dominating factor in Hawaii, and, while the planters are reaping a rich harvest now with the price of their product high on account of the European war, they are very fearful of what will happen to their industry when the struggle abroad shall end and sugar shall be upon the free list. The question is not one of politics with them, it is one of business. They would not be unwilling to have the Democrats remain in power if there were any assurance that they would retain a duty on sugar for revenue purposes," and some of the Democratic congressmen who have returned from the islands are disposed to look with some degree of favor upon the proposition to retain a revenue duty, especially in view of the fact that the treasury needs the money.

"But to keep in line with the principles of their party they insist that it shall be for revenue purposes only. Other Democrats are just as determined as ever they were that sugar shall be free, and contend that the planters can continue operations under free sugar, or at least that most of them can. They learned of the big profits which are now being made and argue that the sugar men should be satisfied, and not ask for a special benefit which would be paid by the whole people.

"The planters don't care whether the duty is termed one for revenue or for protection, so long as they get it. The Republicans favoring a duty and standing as a unit naturally got the attention of the sugar people. That being so, it looked as if one or the other of two presidential candidates in the party might receive some prospect or promise of special favors from them. Both Mr. Mann and Senator Cummins promptly and unhesitatingly declared their policy favoring a duty. They emphasized the fact, according to the statements of their colleagues, upon every occasion, and even went so far as to tell 'what we will do for you when we return to power in 1917.'

"The Hawaiians applauded vigorously at these statements. They were glad to hear them, but they gave not the slightest encouragement to their presidential booms. They were received and courted like any ordinary member of the party. Their hurrahs their stampedes and their alohas were reserved for 'Uncle Joe' Cannon. Everywhere he went 'Uncle Joe' was greeted with loud acclaim. He was hailed as the Grand Old Man who had demonstrated that he could come back, and they seemed obsessed with the idea that the Danville statesman could induce Congress to give them anything they wanted. It was not that they thought of Cannon in connection with the presidency, but rather that they ignored all efforts to direct attention to the candidacy of anyone.

"The Mann boom was flaunted before them time and again, but they failed to recognize it. Instead they yelled for Uncle Joe. Senator Cummins was too modest to suggest his own aspirations and the guarded manner in which it was mentioned by others did not so much as suggest his ambitions to the natives, although the Iowa senator by his pleasant manner, his pleasing address and declaration of principles made many friends, but the natives failed utterly to catch sight of his presidential boom.

"This perhaps was not so disappointing to him, the members of the party say, as it was to Representative Mann, whose friends had fond hopes of giving his boom some decided impetus by reason of the trip. But his Illinois colleague eclipsed him entirely and was the drawing card. Throughout the islands the people wanted to see and hear Come Back Cannon, and they heaped honors and praise upon him. One of the features of the trip was the celebration of Uncle Joe's 79th birthday anniversary at a small town on the island of Maui. Mr. Mann remained just an ordinary congressman, a good one and on the right side, so the sugar men thought, but not deserving of special consideration. Uncle Joe was the real hero and their plaudits were wasted upon him.

Police & Hospital Reports

Clement Enoka, aged 31 years, lifelong resident of Honolulu and employed as an iron worker, met death from carbolic acid poisoning, self-administered, according to the verdict of a jury called at the police station by Sheriff Rose today to investigate the death Sunday.

A jury was called by Sheriff Rose this morning to inquire into the death of Russell F. Downing, member of the Stanford baseball team. R. C. Maple, W. M. Argabrite, J. A. Lanver and Dr. W. C. Hobdy testified to the circumstances. The jury returned a verdict of death due to fracture of the third cervical vertebra, caused by the head of the deceased striking the sand at Waikiki beach while diving into the shallow water. The accident is one of the most unusual ever noted here.

Sheriff Rose is inquiring into the death of Clemon Enoka, an ironworker, who died at the hospital Sunday from an overdose of liniment said to contain chloroform. The police were called to a tenement on Alapai lane, where Enoka was found in a serious condition and suffering much pain. Witnesses to be called at the inquest today say Enoka was visiting the home of a friend and had been drinking. The empty bottle was found beside him. He had been employed at the Honolulu Iron Works as a moulder.

Y. W. C. A. CAMP OPENS WITH HAPPY PICNIC

Tired picnickers, returning on a late train yesterday evening, reported a happy day at the opening of the summer camp of the Y. W. C. A., at Halolupa, Mrs. Frear's home on the Peninsula.

The day was spent in real picnic fashion. There was an enormous dinner served the crowd at the noon hour, but sports of the morning had been engaged in in such a strenuous manner that it was found necessary by the picnic committee to serve another lunch at 4 o'clock, at which the remnants of the noon meal were devoured.

Sixty people were on hand to answer roll call when the meals were announced. Swimming, tennis, sailing, canoeing and games of baseball and croquet held the interest at other hours of the day.

Several girls remained yesterday with Miss Anderson of the Y. W. C. A. staff, who will have supervision of the camp that is to be established. With such a favorable beginning the entire staff is looking for a splendid success of this first summer camp of the association.

Every retail dealer should read the valuable talks now given each day on his special problems. Page Nine.

'CANNON ON OAHU HAD BETTER BE DUMPED INTO SEA'

And They are "Antiquated," Too, if Statement of Congressman Cary Be True

ASTOUNDING TALES ARE TOLD BY FORMER GUEST

That United States coast defense guns in Hawaii are antiquated and will not shoot the distance accredited to them, "even with double charges of powder" and that "there is not enough ammunition in the islands to allow the guns to keep up a continuous fire for more than 'half a day,'" are the astounding assertions Representative William J. Cary of Milwaukee made at Spokane, Wash., on the return trip from Hawaii to his district.

"It would be much better if the government were to dump into the Pacific ocean the guns it has placed and the fortifications it has built in the Hawaiian islands," Mr. Cary is quoted as saying to the Spokesman-Review of Spokane. The representative was included in the congressional party which recently visited the islands.

"As for the Honolulu drydock, the government has put $1,000,000 into trying to build the foundation, and indications are that many more millions will have to be expended if the dock is to be built," he continues. "I learned that the trouble started over a dispute between two engineers. One wanted the drydock built further inshore, where a good foundation could be obtained, and the other, who seemed to have the pull, wanted the dock built where they are trying to build it."

"I may be asked where I got the information to make this statement. I went over there to get all information I could and I got it from sources that convince me it is reliable. There were about 100 senators and congressmen in the party. The Hawaiian territorial government appropriated $40,000 to pay for this trip and invited us to visit. Our visit is of benefit to the entire Pacific country, and the states of the Pacific coast should be grateful to Hawaii for having us make the trip."

HUMAN SKULLS UNCOVERED BY EARTH DIGGERS

Workmen on Building Site Find Remains That May Develop Mystery

What may develop a mystery was revealed this morning when two human skulls and human bones were found by workmen while excavating for a new building at Alakea and Merchant streets.

The bones were in fair preservation, but appeared blackened with age. They are believed to be those of a man and a woman. One skull is much smaller than the other. Each still held a number of teeth. Police Officer Sizemore took charge of the find. He reported the matter to Sheriff Rose, who will turn the bones over to the territorial board of health for disposition.

In the excavation for the foundation of the building, the workmen had reached a depth of about five feet. They were removing a quantity of coral covered with black volcanic sand when a round mass rolled to the feet of a Japanese. When loose earth was removed it revealed the skull. Digging was then directed at this spot. A portion of the other skeleton was soon found. The bones are believed to be those of Hawaiians.

Y. M. C. A. TO SWIM SOON.

The swimming pool committee of the Y. M. C. A. met at noon today with Robert Anderson, Dr. A. F. Jackson, A. H. Tarleton, G. H. Tuttle, H. G. Dillingham and Paul Super present. Final action was taken on the matter of bathing suits and the secretary was instructed to order regulation suits for men and swimming trunks for boys. The order will be placed through a local house.

The campaign for $3000 necessary to buy the suits, install the pump, and take care of the other work, was set to begin the first week in August. At this time members of the association will be asked to contribute to the above fund for these purposes.

Massage is a French Word of Greek Origin, meaning "To Press."

The present day interpretation is a mechanical process of rubbing and kneading which, when performed on the tissues, muscles, glands or nerves of the body, causes friction, the object being to accelerate the circulation of the blood, and also to promote a general stimulation.

Ever since 3000 B. C., when it is known that the Chinese were familiar with the benefits of massage, it has been used in some form, and at the zenith of the Roman Empire, under Julius Caesar, it was extensively used to relieve many forms of physical ailments, and was an important adjunct to the luxurious private and public baths of that period.

Some of the early methods of application were superficial and unscientific, owing to comparative ignorance of human anatomy, and it was not until early in the Eighteenth Century that vibratory massage was correctly applied, although the early vibrators were crude and only partially successful.

Coming down to the present day, there has been constant improvement over the older methods of vibratory massage, until the perfection of the Premier Vibrator made it possible to own an instrument which is portable, safe, vigorous, rapid and uniform in its movement, light in weight, combining maximum efficient speed, without discomfort to the operator.

Obvious benefit follows the use of massage—especially the use of the Premier Vibrator—an instrument which is
